help children develop specific movement skills, a healthy snack, helpful messages about physical activity and healthy eating, activities for parents and children to do together, all while providing opportunities for participants to get to know one another and their community.

Making Books with Mosaic-Newcomer Family Resource Network

In 2009, Communities 4 Families gave out 13 Literacy grants of $500. Here's one example of how a little bit of money can go a long way...

Newcomer parents at St. Matthews Anglican Church worked together with the staff to create a special book for each parent to read with their family. This family book was based on their history, photographs and memories from their first country as well as their experiences in Canada. The parents were encouraged to use this project as a way of sharing their culture and life experiences with their children. Parents chose to use drawings, pictures and photos of their home country to create their books.

As much as possible the books were in English and in the home language of the family. The women are very proud of the books they have made and hopefully through sharing their book with their children at home, children will be given the opportunity to value and take pride in their first language and their culture.

The final book was made of bristle board, covered with mactac and bound with hockey tape. These books are very meaningful and treasured by the participants.

An extension of this book-making happened when students who had completed their books went to another class and helped to teach other students. They taught their bookmaking skills, as well as sharing their own personal books with these other students.

For many families, this was the first time they did this kind of activity. This resulted in stronger class friendships and bonding. They were obviously proud of their work and said how much their children enjoyed the finished books.

One student who had only been in Canada three months said that she was awake at 3 a.m., unable to sleep due to her excitement about going to school the next day to work on her book.

You don't need to be able to read well to read to your child.

Three Stars and a Wish

Another project supported by Communities 4 Families is called 3 Stars and a Wish. This project matches a family to a volunteer mentor from the University. Their goal is to write a family story together.

One of the great things that happens is that parents get to be seen as a source of knowledge to their children. A big impact has been made on all participants including children, parents, and University of Winnipeg mentors.

Children will talk more if you talk about what you see.

Story Sacks

Creative Retirement volunteers have been busy creating Storysacks to lend to schools throughout the City. A Storysack is a Literacy tool. It includes a good children's book, a non-fiction book that links to the story, PLUS activities and props designed to bring reading to life. Reading tips and activity ideas for parents to share with their children, a taped recording of the story, and sometimes a computer CD with easy-to-play literacy games linked to the story complete the Storysack. Storysacks cannot be bought from stores and are made by the community for the community.

For more information on borrowing a Story Sack, call Laurie at Creative Retirement 942-2035
